Directions: Read the following passages carefully and answer the questions given below it.

Passage 1

Winning doesn't mean the other person has to lose. As former P&G brand manager Bruce Miller put in, 'It's not a zero-sum game. It's more like golf than tennis, you are playing against yourself and the course, not the guy across the net or in the next office. Play your best game and, if it's good enough, you'll be a winner. You might not achieve the specific goal you have set, but the company is big enough and flexible enough to move you up and onward in a way that suits your talents. That's winning."

Miller remembers the story of an assistant brand manager who, by his own account, was achieving great things and looked as if he had the world by the tail. At about the time his "class" was ready to go out on sales training, he had a closed-door meeting with his boss. His peers assumed he was the first to get the nod. It turned out his performance had all along been more flash than substance, and the meeting with his boss was to discuss other career alternatives inside or outside the company. Miller is convinced that the moral of the story is that winning is all about your own performance and not about keeping up with what the other guy seems to be doing.

Former CEO ED Artzt equates winning with professionalism: It's mastery of the fundamentals. And that's what you must do to win in management. You must master the fundamentals of the business you're in, the functions you perform, and the process of managing people. If you don't do that, you'll eventually become a journeyman or journeywoman, and the brilliance you once had will surly tarnish.

Mastering the fundamentals of any profession, be it in the arts, sports, or business, requires great sacrifice, endless repetition, and a constant search for the best way to do things. A professional in search of mastery brings an attitude to his or her work that no sacrifice is too great, and no experience or grunt work is too menial if it helps achieve mastery of the fundamentals. It all begins with attitude, striving to attain professionalism and embracing winning as a way of life. If you want to become a winning manager, I urge you to embrace that attitude with all your might.

77. What does Miller mean when he says that winning is not "a zero sum game"?
    A. It does not mean that the other guy has to lose.
    B. You are playing against yourself.
    C. It's more like golf than tennis.
    D. The company is big enough to move you up.
    E. None of these
78. By "more flash than substance," the author means
    A. the achievement was temporary, not lasting.
    B. the achievement was more a matter of chance.
    C. the manager was fooling himself.
    D. None of the above
    E. All are correct
79. A journeyman or journeywoman
    (i) is not a master of fundamentals.
    (ii) is just passing time.
    (iii) is not brilliant.

    A. i and ii
    B. i, ii and iii
    C. i and iii
    D. ii and iii
    E. None
80. The author does not feel that
    A. mastering fundamentals is essential to win.
    B. mastering fundamentals requires great sacrifice.
    C. winning is not a zero sum game.
    D. None of the above
    E. All of the above
81. The best title for the passage could be
    A. Winning
    B. Winning and Professionalism
    C. Getting a Winner's Attitude

D. Mastering Fundamentals is Important
E. Winning and Losing

Passage 2

How many really suffer as a result of labor market problems? This is one of the most critical yet contentious social policy questions. In many ways, our social statistics exaggerate the degree of hardship. Unemployment does not have the same dire consequences today as it did in the 1930's when most of the unemployed were primary breadwinners, when income and earnings were usually much closer to the margin of subsistence, and when there were no countervailing social programs for those failing in the labor market. Increasing affluence, the rise of families with more than one wage earner, the growing predominance of secondary earners among the unemployed, and improved social welfare protection have unquestionably mitigated the consequences of joblessness. Earnings and income data also overstate the dimensions of hardship. Among the millions with hourly earnings at or below the minimum wage level, the overwhelming majority are from multiple-earner, relatively affluent families. Most of those counted by the poverty statistics are elderly or handicapped or have family responsibilities which keep them out of the labor force, so the poverty statistics are by no means an accurate indicator of labor market pathologies. Yet there are also many ways our social statistics underestimate the degree of labor-market-related hardship. The unemployment counts exclude the millions of fully employed workers whose wages are so low that their families remain in poverty. Low wages and repeated or prolonged unemployment frequently interact to undermine the capacity for self-support. Since the number experiencing joblessness at some time during the year is several times the number unemployed in any month, those who suffer as a result of forced idleness can equal or exceed average annual unemployment, even though only a minority of the jobless in any month really suffer. For every person counted in the monthly unemployment tallies, there is another working part-time because of the inability to find full-time work, or else outside the labor force but wanting a job. Finally, income transfers in our country have always focused on the elderly, disabled, and dependent, neglecting the needs of the working poor, so that the dramatic expansion of cash and in-kind transfers does not necessarily mean that those failing in the labor market are adequately protected.

As a result of such contradictory evidence, it is uncertain whether those suffering seriously as a result of labor market problems number in the hundreds of thousands or the tens of millions, and, hence, whether high levels of joblessness can be tolerated or must be countered by job creation and economic stimulus. There is only one area of agreement in this debate-that the existing poverty, employment, and earnings statistics are inadequate for one their primary applications, measuring the consequences of labor market problems.

82. Which of the following is the principal topic of the passage?
    A. What causes labor market pathologies that result in suffering
    B. Why income measures are imprecise in measuring degrees of poverty
    C. Which of the currently used statistical procedures are the best for estimating the incidence of hardship that is due to unemployment
    D. Where the areas of agreement are among poverty, employment, and earnings figures
    E. How social statistics give an unclear picture of the degree of hardship caused by low wages and insufficient employment opportunities
83. The author uses "labor market problems" in lines 1-2 to refer to which of the following?
    A. The overall causes of poverty
    B. Deficiencies in the training of the work force
    C. Trade relationships among producers of goods
    D. Shortages of jobs providing adequate income
    E. Strikes and inadequate supplies of labor
84. The author contrasts the 1930's with the present in order to show that
    A. more people were unemployed in the 1930's
    B. unemployment now has less severe effects
    C. social programs are more needed now
    D. there now is a greater proportion of elderly and handicapped people among those in poverty
    E. poverty has increased since the 1930's
85. Which of the following proposals best responds to the issues raised by the author?
    A. Innovative programs using multiple approaches should be set up to reduce the level of unemployment.
    B. A compromise should be found between the positions of those who view joblessness as an evil greater than economic control and those who hold the opposite view.
    C. New statistical indices should be developed to measure the degree to which unemployment and inadequately paid employment cause suffering.
    D. Consideration should be given to the ways in which statistics can act as partial causes of the phenomena that they purport to measure.
    E. The labor force should be restructured so that it corresponds to the range of job vacancies.
86. The author's purpose in citing those who are repeatedly unemployed during a twelve-month period is most probably to show that
    A. there are several factors that cause the payment of low wages to some members of the labor force.
    B. unemployment statistics can underestimate the hardship resulting from joblessness.
    C. recurrent inadequacies in the labor market can exist and can cause hardships for individual workers.
    D. a majority of those who are jobless at any one time to not suffer severe hardship.
    E. there are fewer individuals who are without jobs at some time during a year than would be expected on the basis of monthly unemployment figures.
87. The author states that the mitigating effect of social programs involving income transfers on the income level of low-income people is often not felt by
    A. the employed poor
    B. dependent children in single-earner families
    C. workers who become disabled
    D. retired workers
    E. full-time workers who become unemployed
88. According to the passage, one factor that causes unemployment and earnings figures to overpredict the amount of economic hardship is the
    A. recurrence of periods of unemployment for a group of low-wage workers.
    B. possibility that earnings may be received from more than one job per worker.
    C. fact that unemployment counts do not include those who work for low wages and remain poor.
    D. establishment of a system of record-keeping that makes it possible to compile poverty statistics.

E. prevalence, among low-wage workers and the unemployed, of members of families in which others are employed.

89. The conclusion stated about the number of people who suffer as a result of forced idleness depends primarily on the point that

A. in times of high unemployment, there are some people who do not remain unemployed for long..

B. the capacity for self-support depends on receiving moderate-to-high wages.

C. those in forced idleness include, besides the unemployed, both underemployed part-time workers and those not actively seeking work.

D. at different times during the year, different people are unemployed.

E. many of those who are affected by unemployment are dependents of unemployed workers.

90. Which of the following, if true, is the best criticism of the author's argument concerning why poverty statistics cannot properly be used to show the effects of problems in the labor market?

A. A short-term increase in the number of those in poverty can indicate a shortage of jobs because the basic number of those unable to accept employment remains approximately constant.

B. For those who are in poverty as a result of joblessness, there are social programs available that provide a minimum standard of living.

C. Poverty statistics do not consistently agree with earnings statistics, when each is taken as a measure of hardship resulting from unemployment.

D. The elderly and handicapped categories include many who previously were employed in the labor market.

E. Since the labor market is global in nature, poor workers in one country are competing with poor workers in another with respect to the level of wages.

Directions: Read the following passages carefully and answer the questions given below.

Passage 1

Extended debate concerning the exact point of origin of individual folktales told by Afro-American slaves has unfortunately taken precedence over analysis of the tales' meaning and function. Cultural continuities with Africa were not dependent on importation and perpetuation of specific folktales in their pristine form. It is in the place that tales occupied in the lives of the slaves and in the meaning slaves derived from them that the clearest resemblances to African tradition can be found.

Afro-American slaves did not borrow tales indiscriminately from the Whites among whom they lived. Black people were most influenced by those Euro-American tales whose functional meaning and aesthetic appeal had the greatest similarity to the tales with deep roots in their ancestral homeland. Regardless of where slave tales came from, the essential point is that, with respect to language, delivery, details of characterization, and plot, slaves quickly made them their own.

78. The author claims that most studies of folktales told by Afro-American slaves are inadequate because the studies
A. fail to recognize any possible Euro-American influence on the folktales
B. do not pay enough attention to the features of a folktale that best reveal an African influence
C. overestimate the number of folktales brought from Africa by the slaves
D. do not consider the fact that a folktale can be changed as it is retold many times
E. oversimplify the diverse and complex traditions of the slaves ancestral homeland

79. The author's main purpose is to
A. create a new field of study
B. discredit an existing field of study
C. change the focus of a field of study
D. transplant scholarly techniques from one field of study to another
E. restrict the scope of a burgeoning new field of study

80. The passage suggests that the author would regard which of the following areas of inquiry as most likely to reveal the slaves' cultural continuities with Africa?
A. The means by which Blacks disseminated their folktales in nineteenth-century America
B. Specific regional differences in the styles of delivery used by the slaves in telling folktales
C. The functional meaning of Black folktales in the lives of White children raised by slave
D. The specific way the slaves used folktales to impart moral teaching to their children
E. The complexities of plot that appear most frequently in the slaves' tales

81. Which of the following techniques is used by the author in developing the argument in the passage?
A. Giving a clich a new meaning
B. Pointedly refusing to define key terms
C. Alternately presenting generalities and concrete details
D. Concluding the passage with a restatement of the first point made in the passage
E. Juxtaposing statements of what is not the case and statements of what is the case

Passage 2

Woodrow Wilson was referring to the liberal idea of the economic market when he said that the free enterprise system is the most efficient economic system. Maximum freedom means maximum productiveness; our "openness" is to be the measure of our stability. Fascination with this ideal has made Americans defy the "Old World" categories of settled possessiveness versus unsettling deprivation, the cupidity of retention versus the cupidity of seizure, a "status quo" defended or attacked. The United States, it was believed, had no status quo ante. Our only "station" was the turning of a stationary wheel, spinning faster and faster. We did not base our system on property but opportunity-which meant we based it not on stability but on mobility. The more things changed, that is, the more rapidly the wheel turned, the steadier we would be.

The conventional picture of class politics is composed of the Haves, who want a stability to keep what they have, and the Have-Nots, who want a touch of instability and change in which to scramble for the things they have not. But Americans imagined a condition in which speculators, self-makers, runners are always using the new opportunities given by our land. These economic leaders (front-runners) would thus be mainly agents of change. The nonstarters were considered the ones who wanted stability, a strong referee to give them some position in the race, a regulative hand to calm manic speculation; an authority that can call things to a halt, begin things again from compensatorily staggered "starting lines." "Reform" in America has been sterile because it can imagine no change except through the extension of this metaphor of a race, wider inclusion of competitors, "a piece of the action," as it were, for the disenfranchised. There is no attempt to call off the race. Since our only stability is change, America seems not to honor the quiet work that achieves social interdependence and stability.

There is, in our legends, no heroism of the office clerk , no stable industrial work force of the people who actually make the system work. There is no pride in being an employee (Wilson asked for a return to the time when everyone was an employer). There has been no boasting about our social workers-they are merely signs of the system's failure, of opportunity denied or not taken, of things to be eliminated. We have no pride in our growing interdependence, in the fact that our system can serve others, that we are able to help those in need; empty boasts from the past make us ashamed of our present achievements, make us try to forget or deny them, move away from them. There is no honor but in the Wonderland race we must all run, all trying to win, none winning in the end (for there is no end).

82. The primary purpose of the passage is to
    A. criticize the inflexibility of American economic mythology
    B. contrast "Old World" and "New World" economic ideologies
    C. challenge the integrity of traditional political leaders
    D. champion those Americans whom the author deems to be neglected
    E. suggest a substitute for the traditional metaphor of a race
83. According to the passage, "Old World" values were based on
    A. ability
    B. property
    C. family connections
    D. guild hierarchies
    E. education
84. In the context of the author's discussion of regulating change, which of the following could be most probably regarded as a "strong referee" in the United States?
    A. A school principal
    B. A political theorist
    C. A federal court judge
    D. A social worker
    E. A government inspector
85. The author sets off the word "Reform" with quotation marks in order to
    A. emphasize its departure from the concept of settled possessiveness
    B. show his support for a systematic program of change
    C. underscore the flexibility and even amorphousness of United States society
    D. indicate that the term was one of Wilson's favorites
    E. assert that reform in the United States has not been fundamental
86. It can be inferred from the passage that the author most probably thinks that giving the disenfranchised "a piece of the action" is
    A. a compassionate, if misdirected, legislative measure
    B. an example of Americans' resistance to profound social change
    C. an innovative program for genuine social reform
    D. a monument to the efforts of industrial reformers
    E. a surprisingly "Old World" remedy for social ills
87. Which of the following metaphors could the author most appropriately use to summarize his own assessment of the American economic system?
    A. A windmill
    B. A waterfall
    C. A treadmill
    D. A gyroscope
    E. A bellows
88. It can be inferred from the passage that Woodrow Wilson's ideas about the economic market
    A. encouraged those who "make the system work"
    B. perpetuated traditional legends about America
    C. revealed the prejudices of a man born wealthy
    D. foreshadowed the stock market crash of 1929
    E. began a tradition of presidential proclamations on economics
89. The passage contains information that would answer which of the following questions?
    i. What techniques have industrialists used to manipulate a free market?
    ii. In what ways are "New World" and "Old World" economic policies similar?
    iii. Has economic policy in the United States tended to reward independent action?
    A. I only
    B. II only
    C. III only
    D. I and II only
    E. II and III only
90. Which of the following best expresses the author's main point?
    A Americans' pride in their jobs continues to give them stamina today.
    B. The absence of a status quo ante has undermined United States economic structure.
    C. The free enterprise system has been only a useless concept in the United States.
    D. The myth of the American free enterprise system is seriously flawed.
    E. Fascination with the ideal of "openness" has made Americans a progressive people.

Directions: Read the following passages carefully and answer the questions given below.

Passage 1

Winning doesn't mean the other person has to lose. As former P&G brand manager Bruce Miller put in, 'It's not a zero-sum game. It's more like golf than tennis, you are playing against yourself and the course, not the guy across the net or in the next office. Play your best game and, if it's good enough, you'll be a winner. You might not achieve the specific goal you have set, but the company is big enough and flexible enough to move you up and onward in a way that suits your talents. That's winning."

Miller remembers the story of an assistant brand manager who, by his own account, was achieving great things and looked as if he had the world by the tail. At about the time his "class" was ready to go out on sales training, he had a closed-door meeting with his boss. His peers assumed he was the first to get the nod. It turned out his performance had all along been more flash than substance, and the meeting with his boss was to discuss other career alternatives inside or outside the company. Miller is convinced that the moral of the story is that winning is all about your own performance and not about keeping up ith what the other guy seems to be doing.

Former CEO ED Artzt equates winning with professionalism: It's mastery of the fundamentals. And that's what you must do to win in management. You must master the fundamentals of the business you're in, the functions you perform, and the process of managing people. If you don't do that, you'll eventually become a journeyman or journeywoman, and the brilliance you once had will surly tarnish.

Mastering the fundamentals of any profession, be it in the arts, sports, or business, requires great sacrifice, endless repetition, and a constant search for the best way to do things. A professional in search of mastery brings an attitude to his or her work that no sacrifice is too great, and no experience or grunt work is too menial if it helps achieve mastery of the fundamentals. It all begins with attitude, striving to attain professionalism and embracing winning as a way of life. If you want to become a winning manager, I urge you to embrace that attitude with all your might.

77. What does Miller mean when he says that winning is not "a zero sum game"?
A. It does not mean that the other guy has to lose.
B. You are playing against yourself.
C. It's more like golf than tennis.
D. The company is big enough to move you up.
E. None of these

78. By "more flash than substance," the author means
A. the achievement was temporary, not lasting.
B. the achievement was more a matter of chance.
C. the manager was fooling himself.
D. None of the above
E. All are correct

A. i and ii
B. i, ii and iii
C. i and iii
D. ii and iii
E. None

80. The author does not feel that
A. mastering fundamentals is essential to win.
B. mastering fundamentals requires great sacrifice.
C. winning is not a zero sum game.
D. None of the above
E. All of the above

81. The best title for the passage could be
A. Winning
B. Winning and Professionalism
C. Getting a Winner's Attitude
D. Mastering Fundamentals is Important
E. Winning and Losing

Passage 2

Woodrow Wilson was referring to the liberal idea of the economic market when he said that the free enterprise system is the most efficient economic system. Maximum freedom means maximum productiveness; our "openness" is to be the measure of our stability. Fascination with this ideal has made Americans defy the "Old World" categories of settled possessiveness versus unsettling deprivation, the cupidity of retention versus the cupidity of seizure, a "status quo" defended or attacked. The United States, it was believed, had no status quo ante. Our only "station" was the turning of a stationary wheel, spinning faster and faster. We did not base our system on property but opportunity-which meant we based it not on stability but on mobility. The more things changed, that is, the more rapidly the wheel turned, the steadier we would be.

The conventional picture of class politics is composed of the Haves, who want a stability to keep what they have, and the Have-Nots, who want a touch of instability and change in which to scramble for the things they have not. But Americans imagined a condition in which speculators, self-makers, runners are always using the new opportunities given by our land. These economic leaders (front-runners) would thus be mainly agents of change. The nonstarters were considered the ones who wanted stability, a strong referee to give them some position in the race, a regulative hand to calm manic speculation; an authority that can call things to a halt, begin things again from compensatorily staggered "starting lines." "Reform" in America has been sterile because it can imagine no change except through the extension of this metaphor of a race, wider inclusion of competitors, "a piece of the action," as it were, for the disenfranchised. There is no attempt to call off the race. Since our only stability is change, America seems not to honor the quiet work that achieves social interdependence and stability.

There is, in our legends, no heroism of the office clerk , no stable industrial work force of the people who actually make the system work. There is no pride in being an employee (Wilson asked for a return to the time when everyone was an employer). There has been no boasting about our social workers-they are merely signs of the system's failure, of opportunity denied or not taken, of things to be eliminated. We have no pride in our growing interdependence, in the fact that our system can serve others, that we are able to help those in need; empty boasts from the past make us ashamed of our present achievements, make us try to forget or deny them, move away from them. There is no honor but in the Wonderland race we must all run, all trying to win, none winning in the end (for there is no end).

82. The primary purpose of the passage is to
    A. criticize the inflexibility of American economic mythology
    B. contrast "Old World" and "New World" economic ideologies
    C. challenge the integrity of traditional political leaders
    D. champion those Americans whom the author deems to be neglected
    E. suggest a substitute for the traditional metaphor of a race
83. According to the passage, "Old World" values were based on
    A. ability
    B. property
    C. family connections
    D. guild hierarchies
    E. education
84. In the context of the author's discussion of regulating change, which of the following could be most probably regarded as a "strong referee" in the United States?
    A. A school principal
    B. A political theorist
    C. A federal court judge
    D. A social worker
    E. A government inspector
85. The author sets off the word "Reform" with quotation marks in order to
    A. emphasize its departure from the concept of settled possessiveness
    B. show his support for a systematic program of change
    C. underscore the flexibility and even amorphousness of United States society
    D. indicate that the term was one of Wilson's favorites
    E. assert that reform in the United States has not been fundamental
86. It can be inferred from the passage that the author most probably thinks that giving the disenfranchised "a piece of the action" is
    A. a compassionate, if misdirected, legislative measure
    B. an example of Americans' resistance to profound social change
    C. an innovative program for genuine social reform
    D. a monument to the efforts of industrial reformers
    E. a surprisingly "Old World" remedy for social ills
87. Which of the following metaphors could the author most appropriately use to summarize his own assessment of the American economic system?
    A. A windmill
    B. A waterfall
    C. A treadmill
    D. A gyroscope
    E. A bellows
88. It can be inferred from the passage that Woodrow Wilson's ideas about the economic market
    A. encouraged those who "make the system work"
    B. perpetuated traditional legends about America
    C. revealed the prejudices of a man born wealthy
    D. foreshadowed the stock market crash of 1929
    E. began a tradition of presidential proclamations on economics
89. The passage contains information that would answer which of the following questions?
    i. What techniques have industrialists used to manipulate a free market?
    ii. In what ways are "New World" and "Old World" economic policies similar?
    iii. Has economic policy in the United States tended to reward independent action?
    A. I only
    B. II only
    C. III only
    D. I and II only
    E. II and III only
90. Which of the following best expresses the author's main point?
    A Americans' pride in their jobs continues to give them stamina today.
    B. The absence of a status quo ante has undermined United States economic structure.
    C. The free enterprise system has been only a useless concept in the United States.
    D. The myth of the American free enterprise system is seriously flawed.
    E. Fascination with the ideal of "openness" has made Americans a progressive people.

Note: Attempt All Questions. 1 x 16 = 16 marks

(I) What is the difference between Hard real time and Soft real time operating system?

(II) Enumerate three UNIX system calls used in Process Control.

(III) What are the advantages of the layered approach to the design of operating system?

(IV) What is the difference between preemptive and non-preemptive scheduling?

(V) The following are some events that occur after a device controller issues an interrupt while process L is under execution.

A. The processor pushes the process status of L onto the control stack.

B. The processor finishes the execution of the current instruction.

C. The processor executes the interrupt service routine.

D. The processor pops the process status of L from the control stack.

E. The processor loads the new PC value based on the interrupt.

What is the correct order in which the above events occur?

(VI) Differentiate between User-level thread and Kernel-level thread.

(VII) Enlist the parameters by which a multilevel feedback queue scheduler is defined.

(VIII) What is the role of processor affinity in context to multiple-processor scheduling?

(IX) What are the requirements that a solution to critical-section problem must satisfy?

(X) What are the two protocols by which we can ensure hold-and-wait condition never occurs in the system?

(XI) A system contains 6 units of resource, and n processes that use the resource. What is the maximum value of n for which the system will be deadlock free if the maximum requirement of each process is 3?

(XII) "Counting semaphores can be used to control access to a given resource consisting of a finite number of instances." Justify the statement.

(XIV) What is Belady's anamoly? Which algorithm suffers from it?

(XV) Consider a computer system with 48-bit virtual addressing and page size of 32 kilobytes. If the computer system has a one-level page table per process, then find out the no. of bits needed to represent page number in the page table.

(XVI) What is the purpose of ACLs in context to file system?

Section- B

Note: Attempt Any Four Questions. 3 x 4 = 12 marks

(I) When do page faults occur? Describe in detail the actions taken by the operating system when a page faults occur.

(II) Consider the reference string

1 2 3 4 2 1 5 6 2 1 2 3 7 6 3 2 1 2 3 6

How many page faults will occur for:

a. First in First out

b. LRU page replacement algorithm?

Assume three & four frames (initially empty) in each case.

(III) Consider a disk pack with a seek time of 4 milliseconds and rotational speed of 10000 rotations per minute (RPM). It has 600 sectors per track and each sector can store 512 bytes of data. Consider a file stored in the disk. The file contains 2000 sectors.

Assume that every sector access necessitates a seek, and the average rotational latency for accessing each sector is half of the time for one complete rotation. What is the total time (in milliseconds) needed to read the entire file?

(IV) What is a Directory? Explain any two ways to implement the directory.

(V) Write short notes on :

a. I/O Buffering

b. Sequential file

c. Indexed file

Section- C

Note: Attempt Any Three Questions. 4 x 3 = 12 marks

(I) Discuss the paged segmentation scheme of memory management and explain how logical address is translated to physical address in such a scheme.

(II) What is the cause of thrashing? How does system detect thrashing? Once it detects thrashing, what can system do to eliminate this problem?

(III) A computer uses 46–bit virtual address, 32–bit physical address, and a three–level paged page table organization. The page table base register stores the base address of the first–level table (T1), which occupies exactly one page. Each entry of T1 stores the base address of a page of the second–level table (T2). Each entry of T2 stores the base address of a page of the third–level table (T3). Each entry of T3 stores a page table entry (PTE). The PTE is 32 bits in size. The processor used in the computer has a 1 MB 16-way set associative virtually indexed physically tagged cache. The cache block size is 64 bytes. What is the size of a page in KB in this computer?

(IV) Consider a storage disk with 4 platters (numbered as 0, 1, 2 and 3), 200 cylinders (numbered as 0, 1, ... , 199), and 256 sectors per track (numbered as 0, 1, ... 255). The following 6 disk requests of the form [sector number, cylinder number, platter number] are received by the disk controller at the same time:

[120, 72, 2], [180, 134, 1], [60, 20, 0], [212, 86, 3], [56, 116, 2], [118, 16, 1]

Currently head is positioned at sector number 100 of cylinder 80, and is moving towards higher cylinder numbers. The average power dissipation in moving the head over 100 cylinders is 40 milliwatts and for reversing the direction of the head movement once is 20 milliwatts. Power dissipation associated with rotational latency and switching of head between different platters is negligible. What is the total power consumption in milliwatts to satisfy all of the above disk requests using the Shortest Seek Time First disk scheduling algorithm?

VIII. Enlist the difference between static class and final class with an example?

IX. What is the use of join() method?

X. Explain Event Delegation Model for Button with an example.

XI. What is the need of Wrapper Classes in Java?

XII. Design a registration form in swings having components: TextField, Passwordfield, CheckBox, RadioButton, Button with Text and Image. Arrange the components according to Border Layout.

XIII. Discuss the different types of Java Bean properties?

XIV. Explain the concept of Bean Introspection along with any one method of Introspector class?

XV. What is the use of java servlet? Enlist the ways of creating servlet?

XVI. What are the disadvantages of REST web services?

Section B

Note: Attempt any Four Questions (3x4=12)

I. Enlist the advantages of creating distributed applications in java? Design a JDBC program to insert record in student table having fields "Student_name", "Age", "Roll_No" and retrieve the records based on any conditional query.

II. Enlist the name of different types of driver available for database connectivity. Explain which driver is suitable in which condition?

III. Discuss the role of Driver Manager Class and its usages in JDBC? Write the steps along with syntax to create JDBC application. Discuss the benefits of Type IV Driver over Type I and Type II?

IV. Explain servlet life cycle methods? Differentiate between HTTP Servlet & Generic Servlet?

V. Enlist the difference between SOAP and REST web services?

Section C

Note: Attempt any Three Questions (4x3=12)

I. Explain RMI architecture. Discuss role of Marshalling and Unmarshalling.

II. Design a RMI program to compute addition of two numbers and calculate square root of addition result? Enlist the steps of the program execution specifying the use of different predefined classes and their methods used in the program?

III. Describe the use of Session Bean and Entity Bean. Differentiate between types of Session Bean and types of Entity Bean?

IV. Differentiate between following:

a. Statement Vs Prepared statement Vs Callable Statement

b. getter() Vs setter()

Course B.Tech, Year II, Semester IV

CSE4005: Discrete Mathematics

Time: 02 ½ Hours Max. Marks: 40

Section- A

Note: Attempt All Questions. 1 x 16 = 16 marks

I. Write the following sets in set builder form:

$$A = \left\{\frac{1}{5}, -\frac{2}{10}, \frac{3}{17}, -\frac{4}{26}, \ldots\right\}$$

II. In a survey of 85 people it is found that 31 like to drink milk 43 like coffee and 39 like tea. Also 13 like both milk and tea, 15 like milk and coffee, 20 like tea and coffee and12 like none of the three drinks. Find the number of people who like all the three drinks. Display the answer using Venn diagram.

III. If $R = \{(1,2), (4,3), (2,2), (2,1), (3,1)\}$ be a relation on asset $A = \{1,2,3,4\}$. Find:

(a) reflexive closure (b) symmetric closure (c) transitive closure of R.

IV. A bag contains 10 red marbles, 10 white marbles, and 10 blue marbles. What is the minimum no. of marbles you have to choose randomly from the bag to ensure that we get 4 marbles of same color?

V. Show that $\frac{1}{1.2} + \frac{1}{2.3} + \cdots + \frac{1}{n(n+1)} = -\frac{n}{n+1}$

VI. What is meant by a recursively defined function? Give the recursive of factorial function.

VII. Find the negation of the following statement: $(\forall x.P(x))v(\exists y.P(y))$

VIII. Show that $\forall x(P(x) \wedge Q(x))$ is logically equivalent to $\forall x P(x) \wedge \forall x Q(x)$, where quantifiers have the same nonempty domain.

IX. In a class, there are 15 boys and 10 girls. Three students are selected at random. What is the probability that 1 girl and 2 boys are selected?

X. Proof by contrapositive "If a and b are consecutive integers, then the sum a + b is odd".

XI. Determine whether the conclusion C is valid in the following premises:

$$H1: P \Rightarrow (Q \Rightarrow R)$$

$$H2: P \wedge Q$$

$$C: R$$

XII. Determine whether the group $(Z_n, \otimes_n)$ is cyclic for n=5 and n=8.

XIII. Show that the 3-regular graph must have an even number of vertices.

XIV. With the help of appropriate example differentiate between path and circuit.

XV. Suppose G is a group of order n, and k $\in$ N is relatively prime to n. Show that $g: G \to G$ defined by $g(x)=g^k$ is one –one . If G is abelian show that G is auto morphism.

XVI. State Lagrange's theorem.

Section- B

Note: Attempt Any Four Questions. 3 x 4 = 12 marks

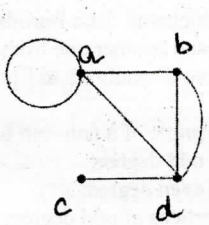
I. Prove that $(Z_6, \otimes_6)$ is an abelian group of order 6.

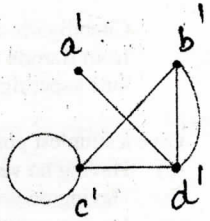
II. Let G be a group and Let a, b $\in$ G be any elements. Then show that
(a) $(a^{-1})^{-1}=1$ (b) $(a*b)^{-1}=b^{-1}*a^{-1}$

III. A subset $H \neq \varnothing$ of G is a subgroup of G if and only if for all a ,b $\in$ H, $a*b^{-1} \in H$.

IV. Define Hamiltonian graph. Prove that complete graphs of three or more vertices have a Hamilton cycle.

V. When two graphs are said to be isomorphic. Whether graph G and G' are isomorphic to each other or not. If, yes list the corresponding Vertices.





Section- C

Note: Attempt Any Three Questions. 4 x 3 = 12 marks

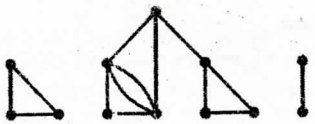
I. Answer the following questions about the planar graph below:



(i) Find the degree of each vertex.
(ii) Find the sum of the degrees of the vertices.
(iii) Does ANY component have an Euler circuit? Why or why not?
(iv) Does ANY component have an Euler path? Why or why not?

II. Model the following situations as (possibly weighted, possibly directed) graphs. Draw each graph, and give the corresponding adjacency matrices.
(a) Amit and Bharti are friends. Amit is also friends with Chetan and David. Bharti, Chetan and Esha are all friends of each other.
(b) Wikipedia has five particularly interesting articles: Animal, Burrow, Chile, Desert, and Elephant. Some of them even link to each other!
(c) It is well-known that in the India, there is a 2-lane highway from Ahamdabad to Baroda, another 2-lane highway from Ahamdabad to Chandigarh, a 3-lane highway from Baroda to Dehradun, a 1-lane road from Baroda to Eluru and another one from Dedradun to Eluru, and a 5-lane superhighway from Chandigarh to Eluru.

III. Give a simplest possible example of a non-null undirected graph:
(a) Having no vertices of odd degree;
(b) Having no vertices of even degree:
(c) Having exactly one vertices of odd degree;

IV. Consider the set of 2x2 matrices with integer entries and let us denote it by $M_2(Z)$. Then $M_2(Z)$ is a ring under the binary operation of matrix addition and multiplication.

Introduction to Microprocessor (CSE-4002)

Uni. Roll No: .....

Time: 2½ Hrs. Total

Marks: 40

Section A

Note: Attempt All Questions (1x16=16)

I. Which addressing modes are in given instruction?
   a. ADI 23H
   b. MOV M,A

II. What is the name of machine cycle if IO/M =1, S1=1 and S0=1?

III. How we increase the delay in any program and also explain the delay calculation of nested loop.

IV. Why interfacing is required for I/O devices?

V. How many address lines are necessary to address three megabyte (3072K) of memory?

VI. Explain RAR and DAA instruction with example?

VII. Explain the compare instruction with example in 8085 microprocessor.

VIII. What are the modes in which 8086 can operate?

IX. How is a 20 bit physical address is computed in 8086 microprocessor?

X. List the segment registers of 8086 microprocessor.

XI. What is the role of stack in calling a subroutine?

XII. Draw 8086 flag register format.

XIII. How many 8259 chip can be connected in cascaded mode?

XIV. What is the control word in BSR mode to set PC4?

XV. What are the priority options available in 8237A?

XVI. Highlight any two differences in 8253 and 8254.

Section B

Note: Attempt any Four Questions (3x4=12)

I. Draw and explain the bit pattern of mode register of 8237A.

II. Design and explain the each internal block diagram of 8255 PPI.

III. With proper required format explain the various operational command words of 8259 PIC.

IV. Write an ALP to blink port C bit 3 with 1 second delay of IC8255.

V. Explain all three I/O modes of operation in IC8255 and also gives some applications of IC8255.

Section C

Note: Attempt any Three Questions (4x3=12)

I. What are the different I/O modes of transfer explain each one? How DMA removed the disadvantages associated with the previous schemes.

II. Explain the 8254 control word format and set up the 8254 as a square wave generator with 1 ms period if the input frequency to 8254 is 1 MHz .Assume counter 0 is used to generate square wave and address of counter 0 = 3000H and control register =30006H.

III. Draw and explain the timing diagram of mode 2 operation of 8253 timer/counter, also explain the different modes of 8253.

IV. Draw the block diagram of Intel 8259 PIC. Also gives the initialization sequence of the 8259 ICW registers.

Section-A

Note: Attempt All Questions. 1×16=16 Marks

I. Define xerosere.
II. What do you understand by balanced ecosystem?
III. What is sanitary land-filling?
IV. In which layer do virtually all weather phenomena take place?
V. Discuss the causes of deforestation.
VI. What is blue baby syndrome?
VII. Define COD.
VIII. Define 'Infant Mortality Rate'.
IX. What is biomagnifications?
X. Give two examples of water borne diseases.
XI. What do you understand by secondary pollutants?
XII. How many decibels can the human ear handle?
XIII. Which is the first law enforced by pollution control board?
XIV. Write the full form of BNHS.
XV. What are the primary goals of sustainability?
XVI. What is value added environmental education?

Section-B

Note: Attempt Any Four Questions. 3×4=12 Marks

I. Discuss the guidelines for environmental ethics.
II. What are the objectives of wildlife protection Act?
III. What is the role of NGOs for improvement of environment?
IV. Write a brief note on ecological footprints.
V. What are the objectives of environmental economics in India?

Section-C

Note: Attempt Any Three Questions. 4×3=12 Marks

I. What are the principles of EIA? What are major steps for an EIA?
II. What is the scope of environmental education? Write the guidelines for excellence of environmental education.
III. What is LCA? Briefly describe the types, phases and its uses.
IV. What is sustainable development? Discuss the progress on developing the concept of sustainable development.
