Speaking Outline (use as prompts while recording — do not read word for word)

> How to fill this in: These are structural prompts only, in your own words and voice. Practising from bullet points instead of a fixed script is also what makes a one-take formal answer sound natural rather than memorised.

- Opening — Greet the panel/interviewer and state your name and where you are from.
- Academic background — Your current course, college, and area of interest within it.
- Defining strengths / experiences — 2–3 things that best represent who you are (skills, achievements, activities, leadership roles, hobbies).
- What drives you — A goal, value, or motivation that shapes your choices.
- Closing — A confident, brief closing line that invites further conversation.

2. SWOT Analysis of Self

Task: Identify 5 genuine points under each of the four categories below, then give a concrete plan to improve each weakness.

S — Strengths

Reflect: What do people consistently compliment you on? What tasks feel effortless to you that others find hard?

#	Point (in your own words)
1
2
3
4
5

W — Weaknesses

Reflect: What do you procrastinate on or avoid? What feedback have you received more than once?

#	Point (in your own words)
1
2
3
4
5

O — Opportunities

Reflect: What is changing around you (college, industry, technology) that could work in your favour?

#	Point (in your own words)
1
2

3
4
5

T — Threats

Reflect: What external factors, competition, or habits could hold you back if unaddressed?

#	Point (in your own words)
1
2
3
4
5

Improvement Plan for Weaknesses

For each weakness listed above, write one specific, actionable step — not a vague intention. E.g. instead of "be more punctual," write "set two alarms and lay out materials the night before every class."

Weakness	Root Cause	Specific Action Step

3. A Day in My Life — 4Ds / Eisenhower Matrix

Task: Plan and record one full day of your real activities, then classify each activity using the Eisenhower Matrix (Urgent × Important) and label it with the matching "D" — Do, Delegate, Defer/Decide, Delete.

The 4 Quadrants (reference)

Urgent + Important Quadrant 1 DO — Act immediately	Not Urgent + Important Quadrant 2 DECIDE — Schedule it
Urgent + Not Important Quadrant 3 DELEGATE — Hand it off	Not Urgent + Not Important Quadrant 4 DELETE — Drop it

My Day, Hour by Hour

> How to fill this in: List your real activities in order from waking up to sleeping. For each one, mark whether it was Urgent/Not Urgent and Important/Not Important, then assign the matching D.

Time	Activity	Urgent?	Important?	Quadrant	4D

Reflection

Briefly answer in your own words (3–5 sentences):

- Which quadrant did most of your day fall into, and what does that say about how you currently manage time?
- Which single change to your daily routine would move more activities into Quadrant 2 (Not Urgent + Important)?
